When Washington stopped funding services for young victims of crime, Chris Coons fought back to protect Delaware’s children.

Washington’s budget knives cut funding for Delaware’s Children’s Advocacy Centers...

The Administration made significant cuts to social service programs, and Children’s Advocacy Centers in Delaware and across the country were set to lose all federal funding as a result.

...until Chris Coons stepped in.

Senator Coons worked with members of both parties to restore the funding for Delaware’s Children’s Advocacy Centers.

“These centers offer young victims access to justice and to the care they need. I was not going to let them fall victim to budget fights in Washington.”

Coons wins fight to save advocacy centers for victims of child abuse.
